Echoes of the past, warnings for the future: a look at extinction in North America

At Bayliss Public Library, Sault Sainte Marie, MI

Bayliss Public Library is an affiliate of Superior District Library

Thursday, March 17, 2016 @ 6:30 P.M.

LSSU Biology Professor, Stephen Kolomyjec, Ph.D., will discuss the major extinctions North America has seen over the past 20,000 years, what we can expect in the future, and what the role of humanity has been (and is) in shaping the biodiversity of our continent. Special attention will be given to the pattern of extinctions which has played out here in Michigan.

The public is welcome!
